Diversity

GEP strongly encourages to discuss the generalizability of the article's insights (e.g., culture or context) and to strive for diversity when citing previous work. If authors don't follow these guidelines, they should explain why.

We discussed the generalisability of our findings and implications in relation to culture and context	N/A
Why not?	Not an empirical paper
We strived for diversity when citing previous work (e.g., gender, underrepresented geographical areas)	no
